

Why do we put an “X” to signify a kiss on the bottom of letters?

The practice began in the Middle Ages, when most people couldn't write. When people testified documents, they used a cross instead of a signature to give them validity and then a kiss to show their sincerity. So the cross and the kiss developed a link. The cross by the way wasn't used just because it was easy to draw.it was the sign of St. Andrew and implied a sacred guarantee and promise to fulfil an obligation.
